1918 Issue of Literary Digest Tells How to Grease a Car

LITERARY DIGEST: I was reading a Literary Digest for April 20, 1918, and the ad said this:

"This is what you do and this is all you get, when you grease a car the old way:

"With the common grease cup, greasing your car is one continual muss. It's such a disagreeable job to crawl around your car that you put it off—day after day—week after week—and when a lot of squeaks and rattles finally cry out for attention, you find the grease passages so clogged up with dirt and grit that it is impossible to get the grease into your bearings. And eventually you have a noisy prematurely old car—all because until recently you were compelled to put up with the dirty wasteful, inefficient, old-fashioned grease cup."

Boy that was awful, wasn't it?—having to grease a car like that. But a new way was advertised and it tickles me greasy, because that old way sure was disgusting.

The same ad tells you how to do it the new way.

"This is all you do—this is what you get," it says:

"The Copeman system is to the old fashioned grease cup what the electric starter is to the crank. Not a grease cup—not a grease gun—but a combination of both. You first equip your car with the patented Copeman Lubri-Caps and thereafter instead of using the dirty grease bucket simply slip in the clean handy Lubri-Caps (high grade hard grease in a paper capsule) as they are needed. Just slip in the Lubri-Cap—give the handle of the Lubri-Cup a turn or two—and the positive pressure feed quickly eliminates your squeaky bearings for the simple reason that they get the grease."

This 1918 issue of The Literary Digest was handed me by Millard Lynch, who wants it back.

Most of the news and cartoons dealt with World War I as the big conflict was raging at the time, but for the sake of better international relations this column will not quote any of the name-calling of that day. There were a lot of the ads that we read today—Musterlo, Hammernill Bond, Florsheim Shoes, Herbert Tarreytons in the package and Prince Albert in the can.

Then there were the Paige and Hupmobile automobiles, which we don't have today. Three in one oil which we do have, and the Symphonola, which plays all the records and which you could own for ten cents a day.

Remember the page of jokes the magazine called "The Spice of Life"? Just for old times' sake let's pull out one of them:

Jack (gallantly): "Betty, dear, anything that you say goes."

Betty (quickly): "Jack!"

SPORTS DEPT.: Was looking through the sport page of the Southern Illinoisian (April 19, 1954—not 1918) and ran across some news about former local boys in college. Might as well put it here as to take up room on the sport page:

Bob Williams, who used to run second to Sammy DeNeal in the 440 when both were in HTHS here, beat him out in a track meet between Rolla and Southern at Carbondale last week. Hank Warfield of SIU was first, Williams of Rolla second and DeNeal of SIU third.

"The three men hit the finish line less than a step apart," the story said.

And, to boot, Williams finished third in the shot put.

Here's something else. Val Gribble, former HTHS footballer, got third in the low hurdles running for Rolla.

Gribble, who played fullback at Harrisburg and halfback one year at Southern, played end and in the line for Rolla last year.

His coach said: "I needed ends last year and he switched without much trouble. He was so versatile he could play almost any line position better than anybody I had."

Still Wrangle Over Monitored Phone Talks of McCarthy, Army

Will They or Will They Not Be Aired Publicly at Hearing? That's the Question

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate investigators faced more haggling today over whether monitored telephone conversations between Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy and the Army will be aired publicly in hearings on their row.

Acting Chairman Karl E. Mundt (RSD) of the Senate Investigating Subcommittee said McCarthy gave only "fuzzy consent" to make public what he said to Pentagon officials in calls he did not know were being written down.

Mundt said he may call a secret meeting of the subcommittee and the six participants in the bitter Army-McCarthy fight next week to try to hammer out a formula for getting the texts of the calls into the public record. He said it would "require some negotiating."

But he declared the issue would not delay "one iota" the subcommittee's televised hearings into the drama-packed dispute. The hearings will resume Monday with further cross-examination of Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens on his charges that McCarthy and subcommittee counsel Roy M. Cohn used heavy pressure to obtain false treatment for a drafted aide, Pvt. G. David Schine.

Subcommittee members found themselves up in the air over a motion adopted unanimously after a two-hour wrangle Friday to subpoena the Army's stenographic transcripts of calls "relevant" to the dispute.

Mundt and some other members and McCarthy made it clear they felt the subcommittee still must decide whether the transcripts will be placed in the public record. Others thought that McCarthy had agreed to make the conversations public.

The controversy over the monitored calls erupted when the Army tried to introduce the text of a call McCarthy made to Stevens last Nov. 7 regarding Schine.

Stevens testified that McCarthy told him in the conversation that Cohn thought Schine, who had just been drafted, "ought to be a general." McCarthy himself, Stevens said, suggested that Schine be given a few week-ends off "perhaps to take care of his girl friends."

He said the bitter battle might be a forerunner of what is in store for a broad slice of Asia and the Pacific unless the doctrines of the free nations prevail.

The President emphasized that the United States need not fear war in the Far East, however, so long as it stands behind the founding fathers' principles of decency and justice for all.

Mr. Eisenhower repeated several times the need for interdependence among nations—economically, politically and spiritually.

Earlier, in a brief speech at Hodgenville, Ky., the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln, the President praised Lincoln as an American President who never stood up in public and excoriated another American.

President Eisenhower returned to his vacation headquarters at the Augusta National Golf Club late Friday night. Since leaving Washington, New York, Ft. Knox, Hodgenville, and Lexington.

Eisenhower Tours, Talks In Kentucky

By MERRIMAN SMITH
UNITED PRESS White House Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—President Eisenhower rested at his vacation retreat here today from a grueling 2,000 mile tour and a round of speechmaking.

In his latest address the President warned at Lexington, Ky., that the battle of Dien Bien Phu represents a "test" of whether dictatorship or freedom will prevail.

The statement was made "off the cuff" at the 175th convocation of Transylvania College during the President's tour of Kentucky.

He said the bitter battle might be a forerunner of what is in store for a broad slice of Asia and the Pacific unless the doctrines of the free nations prevail.

Ike's Early Rising Tough on Newsmen, Egypt Editors Told

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP)—President Eisenhower ought to stay in bed longer in the mornings and give the White House reporters a break, Douglas B. Cornell, Associated Press Washington correspondent, quipped Friday night in speaking at a dinner session of the Southern Illinois Editorial Association in the Giant City State Park Lodge. More than 100 area editors and visitors attended.

Cornell said that after trailing former President Harry S. Truman on his brisk early morning walks around the capitol grounds he had hoped there would be a change in such things when President Eisenhower took over in the White House. No luck. He gets up and goes to work early, too.

The speaker recounted many of his experiences while covering the Washington political scene for nearly 25 years, 19 of them for the Associated Press. Much of his discussion concerning past and current events was on the lighter side.

A new scrap may break out on the controversial Bricker amendment, he said, because it still is hanging over Congress and may be brought out into the open once more.

The much publicized "new look" in the nation's military establishment, Cornell said, really isn't so much of a new look but its result of a reappraisal of military strategy in the light of new weapons of war.

Southern Illinois editors will conclude their annual spring meeting with a business session at Giant City Saturday morning. During Friday they met on the campus at Southern Illinois university for discussions of newspaper editing, photography, newspaper law, features and country correspondents, and office supplies and printing business.

Cornell appeared in conjunction with the celebration of Journalism Day at Southern Illinois university Thursday, as Southern's first Elijah Lovejoy visiting lecturer in journalism, and as the fifth campus speaker in a "Jobs in Journalism" series sponsored by the SIU Journalism Department and the Journalism Students Association. Cornell was at SIU from Wednesday through Friday.

Many Areas Set For Fast Time, Saline Stays Put

Daylight savings time starts Sunday in many sections of the nation, but not in Saline county. Clocks will be set ahead one hour in all or most of 16 states, in scattered cities in six other states, and in the nation's capital.

The New England and Middle Atlantic States form the most solid block going on "fast" time.

Most of the South will stay on standard time.

In the Midwest and West, scattered areas will make the switch to daylight time.

The changeover will mean an hour's less sleep for millions of Americans Saturday night unless they sleep an hour later than usual Sunday morning.

But they will regain the "lost" hour next fall when they switch back to standard time.

Rita Hastens To 2 Children Said Neglected

Judge Stepped In While She and Dick
Haymes Vacationing

NEW YORK (AP)—Glamorous Rita Hayworth sped north from Miami today to fight for possession of the two daughters she is charged with neglecting while vacationing with her fourth husband, Dick Haymes.

The red-haired actress and Haymes checked out of Miami's fashionable Roney Plaza Hotel Friday at about the same time the two children were being placed in technical custody of a sheriff in suburban White Plains.

The couple, ending a two-week vacation of sun bathing and fishing, headed north in a borrowed Jaguar sports car. They were expected to arrive at their hotel here early today to confer with Rita's attorney, Bartley Crum.

Children's Court Judge George W. Smyth signed the order in White Plains placing the children in protective custody. He said they were found playing in an antique shop surrounded by motels and tourist homes.

Mrs. Dorothy Chambers, operator of the shop, said she was the children's governess. She said she had cared for the children for a long time and had taken them to White Plains from New York after their mother and stepfather left for the Florida vacation.

Smyth left the children in Mrs. Chambers' care pending a hearing next Tuesday on their eventual disposition. The children must appear in court then.

The children, Rebecca, 9, and Yasmin, 4, were taken from the custody of their mother on complaint of the Westchester County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. The society said the two little girls were being "neglected and mistreated."

SALINE COUNTY OIL REPORT: Drilling Operations In Saline County

By BOB SKEELS

Most of the oil activity in the county this week is centered around the oil field being developed four miles northwest of Eldorado, where George and Wrathe Robinson have been completing some fine Cypress and Aux Vases producers.

This week, George and Wrathe No. 1 and Sally Rhine, 2-8-6e, is flowing oil at the rate of 35 bbls. per hour (over 800 barrels a day) after fracturing the Cypress sand 2534-40.

Their No. 2 test on the Rhine farm, a north offset is on a production test and is estimated to complete for around 50 barrels a day, also in the Cypress sand after fracture.

Their No. 1-A Frank Parker, four miles northwest of Eldorado, is pump testing in the sand, but is making nearly as much water as oil. It swabbed 150 barrels of oil and 100 barrels of water a day after a 4000 gallon gel fracture.

The No. 1 Harvey and Lillie Boswell, section 2-8-6e, is cleaning out the casing opposite the saturated Cypress sand 2502-98, and their No. 5 B. F. Lemons is still a location.

In the same area, Dee Miller and Walter Duncan are testing oil satu-

Order Son Held in Death of Father Who Died Month Ago

GENEVA, Ill. (AP)—A Kane county coroner's office has recommended that Harry Pike be held to a DuPage county grand jury in connection with the death of his 80-year-old father.

The jury did not specify a charge. The action followed an autopsy on James Pike, the father, showing death caused by pneumonia. He died at a hospital here, where he had been taken after a quarrel with his 53-year-old son at their Naperville home March 28.

The jury reported its belief that injuries allegedly suffered by the fight contributed to the elder Pike's fatal illness.

The Thursday night rains in the Middle Fork and Bankston creek watersheds were responsible for several days' more water in the reservoir.

France Reports Heavy Losses In Counter Blow

Unexplained Slip-Up Partly Blamed for Failure in Battle

HANOI, Indochina (AP)—French forces counter-attacking in a desperate effort to reconquer part of the shrinking Dien Bien Phu fortress have been thrown back with "very heavy" losses, French headquarters announced today.

Overwhelming Communist artillery fire and force of numbers plus an unexplained slip-up in liaison between air and ground forces were blamed for the failure of Friday's counter-attack by defenders of the besieged garrison.

U. S.-Built Planes Fight
Twenty-five American-built Corsair fighter planes recently arrived in Indochina aboard the United States aircraft carrier Saipan participated in the action. French pilots flew the fighters, fastest in Indochina, on their first mission in the war.

In disclosing the liaison mistake a French spokesman said, "it seems that there was a lack of co-ordination between the Franco-Vietnamese infantry and the aviation action."

He did not say whether the pilots of the American-supplied Corsairs were to blame.

The High Command said Friday's ground action was aimed at an outpost of the "Huguette" position abandoned only a few hours earlier by the defenders. It lies on the northwest side of Dien Bien Phu's ever-contracting defense ring and from it the airfield can be covered.

Must Seal Breach
Loss of the position opened a breach in the French bastion which Brig. Gen. Christian de Castries had to seal or face serious consequences.

The war in Indochina reached a most critical stage. Dien Bien Phu was not alone at stake. The French said the situation in the vast, rich Red River delta, keystone of France's position in Indochina, had become "extremely serious."

Communist forces estimated at 100,000 in the delta area had carried out so many attacks on vital road and supply points between Hanoi and the supply point of Haiphong that a military airlift "has become almost indispensable."

The Red Delegations Arrive

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By BREW PEARSON

DREW PEARSON Says:
Senator McClellan Almost Battled Boston Lawyer, Joe
McCarthy Jumps To Farm
Wagon: For Years McCarthy Voted Against Farmers.

WASHINGTON. — The inside story has never been told of how close Sen. John McClellan, Arkansas Democrat, came to a fist fight with Sam Sears, the Boston attorney who was kicked out after one week as chief counsel in charge of investigating the Army-McCarthy row.

Behind closed doors McClellan demanded why Sears had not told the Senate investigating committee about his past support for Senator McCarthy. Earlier, Sears had claimed that he had never expressed an opinion on McCarthy "publicly or privately," but it developed later that he had been an ardent McCarthy rooster and was once even recommended by Mrs.
McCarthy to take the pro-McCarthy side in a debate.

But at the closed-door meeting,
Sears blandly claimed: "I told Senator Jackson (Washington Democrat) about my past statements on McCarthy."

"That's asinine!" shouted Mc-Clellan. "I was there when you talked to Senator Jackson!"

"I don't remember ever meeting you before," shrugged Sears.
Yet McClellan and Jackson had spent an hour with Sears, questioning him about his past, and had actually taken Sears in to meet the other members of the subcommittee.

The Arkansas senator was so furious at Sears' bland denial that he had to be restrained from going after him with his fists.

SPRING BUSINESS BOOM

The President's economic advisers are more worried than they like to admit over the spring business boom.

Reason for worry is that the boom hasn't been as big as they expected. There has been a seasonal spurt of prosperity, particularly in the construction business.
But retail sales are down, though the figure has never been made public.

And a flood of high school and college graduates will pour into the labor market in another month and a half. This almost certainly means worse unemployment this summer—unless rumors of war in Indochina pick things up.

JOE JUMPS TO FARMERS

Despite a past record of anti-farm voting, Senator McCarthy has cocked a political ear to Wisconsin rumblings and has sent his investigators to comb the Agriculture Department. Their orders are: ferret out the "secret Communists" responsible for "undermining the farm economy."

Joe has already taken the stump against Benson's flexible price-support plan, and has added his voice for high, rigid price supports.
In fact, he has gone the farm bloc one better and called for 100 per cent of parity instead of the present 90 per cent.

However, this just happens to be an about-face for McCarthy — and a belated one. For in the past he has fought for a sliding scale of price supports ranging from 90 down to 75 per cent of parity. His position was identical with Benson's. When Georgia's agriculture-minded Sen. Dick Russell rammed legislation through Congress in 1949, pegging support prices at 90 per cent of parity on the six basic commodities, McCarthy joined in the motion to recommit the bill. He wanted to substitute the sliding, 90-to-75 per cent scale, instead.

JOE'S FARM RECORD

This did not end McCarthy's anti-farm voting record, however. He has voted against the farmers right down the line.

When the Commodity Credit Corporation wanted to increase its borrowing authority by $2,000,000,

so it could pay the price supports, he voted no.

And when the Truman administration wanted to increase storage facilities, McCarthy also voted no.
This was the worst blow he has struck at the national farm program, and, partly as a result, farmers' surplus grain was left overflowing the bins and rotting on the ground.

McCarthy has also voted repeatedly to cut vital appropriations for the Agriculture Department, including a straight meat-tax slash of 5 per cent on May 19, 1949.
Later, on July 26, 1951, he backed a one-third cut in the funds for helping farmers obtain machinery and other production materials.

On the critical subject of soil conservation, McCarthy has voted six times to sabotage the program.
Agriculture experts now agree that inadequate soil conservation is a basic cause of the tragic
"dust bowl" in the southwest.

Since he first came to the Senate, McCarthy has also had 15 chances to vote for rural electrification projects bringing electric power to the farms. On the 15 roll calls, he voted 12 times against the farmers.

But today he has suddenly become the farmers' passionate, new-found friend, probing for
"Communists" in the Agriculture Department who are "sabotaging" the farmer.

JOHN SPARKMAN'S FOES
Sen. John Sparkman of Alabama, who ran for vice president on the Adlai Stevenson ticket, is paying the penalty of accepting the Democratic national platform. He's also paying the price of being a conscientious senator.

Because the Democratic platform contained a civil-rights clause — which isn't popular with some people in Alabama — and because Sparkman automatically had to accept it, he is faced with a primary fight from Laurie Battle, a nice but on the whole innocuous congressman.

Sparkman seems almost certain to win the primary, but he's had to take a lot of time from the Senate, and also he faces the fact that all sorts of money is pouring into the state against him. Much of it is reported to come from Texas and the oil tycoons who got sore when Sparkman voted consistently against Tidelands oil.

Congressman Battle seems to be well supplied with radio and TV time, plus paid workers. Five paid workers turned up in Lawrence county the other day beating the bushes for Battle.

"The trouble is," remarked one senator, "that John Sparkman tried to be a senator for all the people of Alabama, not just for the special interests."

SAVES THE SHINGLES

Asbestos shingles will last longer if you don't walk on them. When working on a roof, stand on a plank placed over two old tires, suggests Capper's Farmer. This rig distributes the weight and doesn't slide as will a board that is laid directly on the shingles. The idea works well on slate roofs also.

Lipstick or rouge stains on clothing can be removed by first softening them with glycerin, then washing in hot soapsuds.

XVIII
Mark brought the car to a grinding stop in front of the Mansfield place. A police officer opened the door for them.

"Find anything?" Richards demanded.

"A couple of microphones."

"Microphones. One was planted in the study or workroom, and the other in Mansfield's bedroom. Clever work, too. Right in the sound-proofing. Come and see."

"They saw the microphones."

"Can't trace the wires," the officer said. "There are wires all right, but they're just hanging loose. A lot of wire, but it doesn't go any place. I thought of that, pried the mikes loose, and looked. The wires were just connected at this end."

Mark said, "We can find out who put in this soundproofing."

"I can tell you that," the officer said proudly. "Ed Stone's company does that kind of work here. Only one that does."

Mark Richards thought it over. He said, "You've done good work. Anything else?"

"Haven't found any threatening letters. But, Lieutenant, there are a million places in the house where anything could be hidden. And there is one other thing. In the closet in the bedroom, there's an old suit coat, looks like. Pretty dirty and full of holes. The funny thing is it's the wrong size. At least it's bigger than the rest of the stuff."

"Let's take a look."

The garment was many sizes larger than the rest of Mansfield's small but expensive and well-cared-for wardrobe. It was frayed at the cuffs, was spotted, and a button was missing.

When Mark took it from the hanger, it was even more obvious the coat was in bad condition. Richards looked at the label. "A local tailor. We'll be able to check the owner, or at least the man for whom it was made."

When Jim held it up between himself and the light, he could see a place between the padded shoulders which was even more worn, which was so thin as to be practically a hole.

"Let's take another look at that shed and workroom," Jim suggested.

Richards took out his bunch of keys without argument. And it was Richards who went directly to the lathe at the workroom end of the shed. He picked up a metal shaving. "Look here, Jim. Doesn't this look the same as that piece in that coat?"

"Looks the same," Jim said. "You can check, though."

"If it's worth while," Mark said gloomily. "For a minute there I thought that odd-sized coat might mean something. But it's pretty obvious now what it was used for. Just a slipover coat Mansfield wore while he worked in his shop."

Dunn walked to the other end of the long shed, wondered as he had before why the plump dressmaker's dummy should be standing there at the end of a cleared space which ran the length of the building. But his curiosity was vague. The larger part of his mind was on Nancy, and the coming ordeal for her. He had promised to be at the funeral.

He had not reached the dummy when the officer stationed in Mansfield's apartment came out to them.

"Mr. Dunn. Phone call for you. It's Doc Pardon and he's yelling something about it being a matter of life or death."

Jim hurried inside to the phone, his mind whirling with thoughts of possible accidents which could have happened to Nancy. She had been so much in his mind he could not shake his feeling of something being wrong with her, until he heard Pardon's impatient and urgent voice.

"Dunn? Been hunting for you all over the place for the last hour. Get down here to the hospital right away, won't you?"

"Hospital, what for?"

Forced Narcotics
From Doctor Who Hired Him Charged

CHICAGO (AP)—Francis Bonatto, a 27-year-old chauffeur, today faced charges of extorting daily narcotics rations from the 69-year-old doctor who employed him.

The doctor, John E. Zaremba, signed a complaint accusing Bonatto of persuading him to write 10 to 15 prescriptions for morphine and synthetic drugs daily.

Bonatto was also charged with failure to register as a narcotics addict.

Zaremba told police Bonatto sold him on the idea of protection due to his age and two years ago moved in with him.

He said his chauffeur persuaded him to buy a 1949 luxury car, although he had never owned one before. Bonatto frequently borrowed $40 to $50, the doctor said.

When detectives arrested Bonatto at his room Friday they also seized his stamp collection, which he at first said was worth $20,000. He later admitted buying it for $1,900, police said.

Police said Zaremba told them his chauffeur would display a violent temper if the doctor refused his requests. Zaremba said he usually gave in due to fear.

Allergics, Ahoy! Hay Fever Fund Out To Fill Coffers--And Not with Hay

By WARD CANNEL

NEA Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK (NEA)—Dig down, brother. There's a brand new fund-raising drive on the horizon. And guess who's going to be called on to fill the coffers? Us allergics!

It's called the National Hay Fever Fund; it's sponsored by the Hay Fever Prevention Society; and for eight million summertime sneezers, wheezers, coughers and itchers, it may pay the way to relief.

At the same time, the society says, it will cut industrial and agricultural waste by cutting the lost man-hours during what hay fever sufferers knowingly call "the season."

For the uninitiated, hay fever is easy to explain. It is a philosophy and a way of life built on the microscopic pollen of the ragweed plant. And during the weeks of mid-August into frost time, when the ragweed pollinates, the hay feverite expresses his true feelings with the exclamation cry: "I'm miserably unhappy."

But for thousands of sufferers, the joke is short-lived. Unalleviated hay fever can produce asthma—a respiratory ailment that chokes its victims to death.

Clinically, hay fever is an allergy: the body reacting to a foreign substance with uncomfortable symptoms. A recent survey has shown 25 million Americans to be allergic to one or more everyday materials—foods, clothing fabrics, trees, grasses, cosmetics.

It is the allergy to ragweed pollen alone that is known as hay fever. And it is against this plant that the National Hay Fever Fund will arm fighters.

The goal is set for $400,000—exactly one-thousandth the amount of money Americans each year give to charitable causes.

According to the National Information Bureau, which keeps active files on almost every national non-profit organization that calls on American donations, about $4 billion went into health, culture, veteran, welfare, youth, foreign aid and international relations coffers last year.

Most of that money, the NIB reported, came from public and corporation subscription. Today, the Bureau says, philanthropic organizations—with their buildings, capital and endowments—are large enough to stand side by side with America's major industries.

By comparison, the Hay Fever Fund is small, even for the job of eradicating ragweed from the national landscape. But as one more caller following the Community Chest, Red Cross, polio, cancer and hundreds of other fund-raisers, the Hay Fever Society believes it's not a job to be—er—sneezed at.

A device now is available for typewriters that protects the works from erasure debris. Normally, the device rides in a convenient position on the carriage. When erasures are to be made, it is leaned against the platen and the erasure debris rolls down into its small gutter.

NBA Says Must Shoot Quick or Lose the Ball

NEW YORK (AP)—National Basketball Association officials were confident today that they finally have come up with a new rule that almost guarantees to curb stalling tactics and foul exchanges.

The officials, who conclude their three-day meeting here today, have adopted a rule which specifies that a team must take a shot at the basket within 24 seconds after gaining possession of the ball. Failure to do so will result in loss of possession.

The county, the member said, ranks seventh in the state and 16th in the nation in dairy production and "oleo will not be tolerated."

Cultural Methods Simplest Way to Control Weeds, SIU Agronomist Says

CARBONDALE, Ill. — Cultural methods are the simplest control for weediness in forage and meadow crops, says E. F. Sullivan, Southern Illinois University agronomist. Chemical control methods are getting use, but many weed killers still are in experimental stages, he points out.

Sullivan suggests such control practices as these:

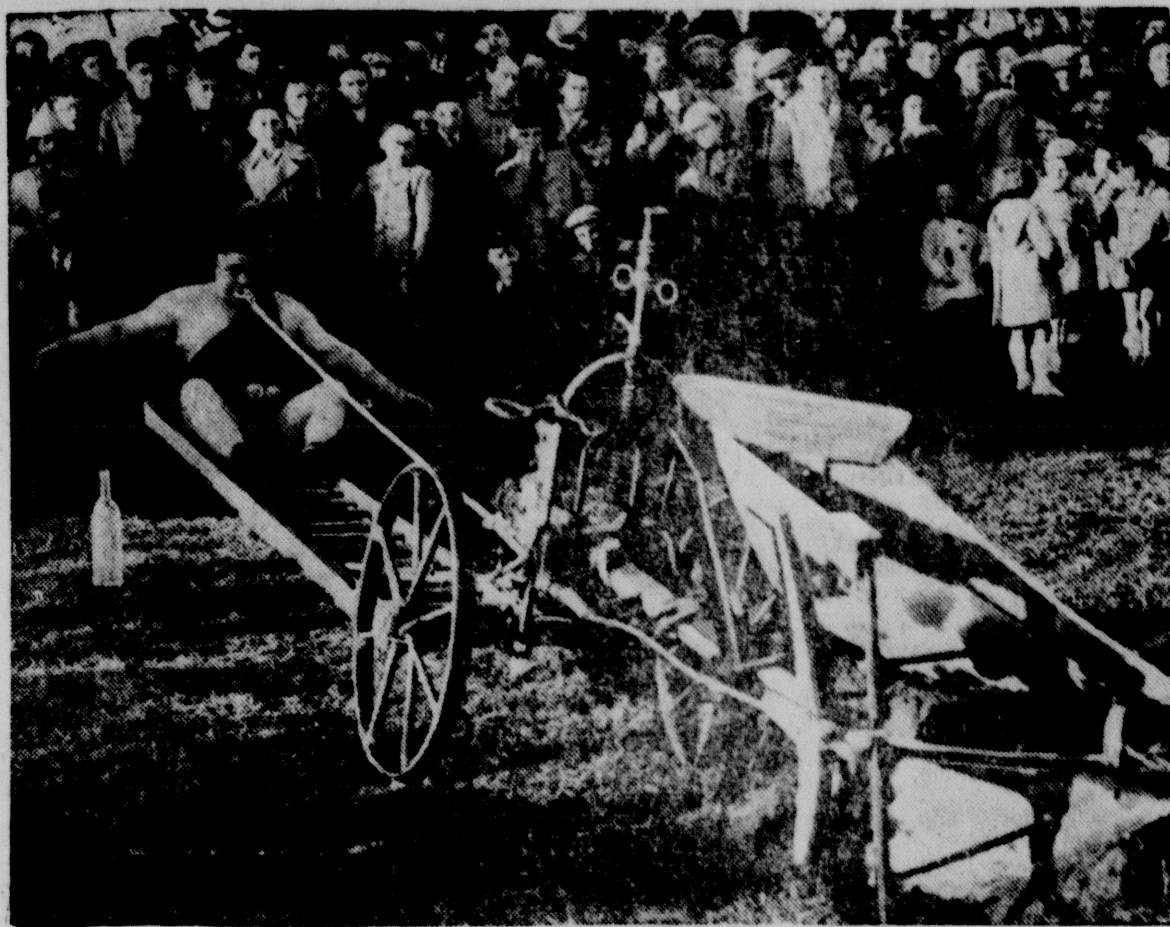

1. Eradicate as many weeds as possible prior to seeding. For meadows some annual weeds may be controlled by crop rotation prior to establishing the crop. Preparing the seed bed well in advance of seeding will enable the farmer to kill one or more crops of young weeds by working the soil shallow several times.

2. Plant seed that is comparatively free of weed seeds.
3. Promote strong competition by producing such a vigorous growth of forage that weeds do not have opportunity to become established. Sowing legumes or such summer annual forages as soybeans rather than the moisture favorable will germinate seed quickly and give it a rapid start to establish a cover that will retard weeds.

For meadows a forage mixture of legumes and grasses often is more efficient in competing with weeds than is a single crop.

Adequate liming and fertilizing controls the so-called poverty weeds. Fall seedlings of legume meadows will become better established by spring to compete with the predominating summer annual weeds.

4. Mowing will help control weeds that outgrow the meadow crop. Usually the best time to cut weeds is near the blossom stage for then reserve food supplies in the weed roots are nearly exhausted and the plant has not yet seeded. The best place for weedy forage is in the silo.

BICUSPID PLOWING.—Andre Le Gall, of Saint-Malo, France, isn't trying to get rid of an aching molar. The 53-year-old farmer is merely showing skeptics in the crowd that he can plow up a field by pulling the farm implement with his teeth.

SIU Country Column

It is obvious that chicks can't grow unless they eat. Hence it is important to keep plenty of feed before them. Who wants to raise chicks that do not grow rapidly? Fast growth is important from the profit-making standpoint.

In considering the problem of profitably feeding poultry it is desirable to keep in mind that tests show broiler chickens may be produced at a feed conversion rate of about three pounds of feed per pound of broiler. In contrast, to completely finish a capon takes from six to eight pounds of feed per pound of capon.

Persons having in mind a forest planting program for rough farm acres unsuited for pasture or cultivation should consider these hints:

If the area to plant is large, rent a tree planting machine. Through your farm adviser or soil conservation men you may make arrangements for such machines at reasonable rates. If land surfaces are not too steep for such machines, the planting operation will be speeded up greatly. Their work is quite satisfactory.

In most cases it is advisable to plant about 1,000 trees to the acre at intervals of about six by seven feet. The trees should not be planted in the shade of other trees. Sunlight is important for rapid growth.

During the planting operation the seedlings should be carried in a bucket containing enough water to cover the roots.

One of the best ways to keep net farm earnings high is to have high crop yields. This means high yields on all land—the cultivated crops, the permanent pasture, and the forestry acres—not just corn, soybeans and wheat.

Corn planting should be delayed until a safe date from corn borers—usually around the middle of May. Most good corn growers plant up to 16,000 grains per acre.

More soil water means higher crop yields, too. The water supply in the soil can be increased by plowing under plant residue and green plants, contour tillage, and mulching with crop residues.

If you are planning to try one of the new soil conditioners in the garden, apply in strips over the row or in the plant hills. Such methods will reduce the quantity of conditioner needed by about two-thirds as compared with broadcast treatment. An ordinary kitchen flour sifter has been found an effective applicator for such conditioners. Mixing the material with a small amount of dry soil aids in getting even distribution. The only way such conditioners may be applied effectively is to put them on when the soil is in good workable condition to permit thorough mixing.

This hint in transplanting woody plants: Many roots are necessarily injured or lost in the transplanting process. So when possible, the plant tops should be pruned at planting time to keep the top and the root system reasonably in balance.

Starter Fertilizer Starts Gardens Fast

URBANA — Low-cost, easy-to-use starter fertilizers will help get your vegetables off to a good start.

Norman Oebker, vegetable specialist at the University of Illinois College of Agriculture, says the fertilizers, which are to be mixed with water, are sold in most places you buy other garden supplies.

It takes little more than an ounce to a gallon of water for the solution, Oebker says, and you need half a pint or less for each plant.

You can get all kinds of fertilizers, but you should keep two things in mind: Tomatoes and other crops that produce fruits need a fertilizer that is high in phosphorus. Phosphorus content of fertilizer is indicated by the middle number. A good formula is 10-52-17. It has five times as much phosphorus as it has nitrogen, which is shown by the first number.

For cabbage and other leafy vegetables, use a mixture that has only about twice as much phosphorus as nitrogen. A good mixture is 15-30-15.

Starter solutions are simple to use. Simply mix the material with water in the form you buy it, and pour the solution around the plant when you set it out. Directions come with the fertilizer.

Test for boron takes only one soil sample for every 10 acres.

Soil Treatment By Insecticides Proves Valuable

Tests show that soil insecticides may increase corn production by three to seven bushels an acre. Treating soil with aldrin can prove effective in controlling corn seed beetle, corn seed maggot, grape colapsis, wireworms, white grubs, rootworms and possibly other insects.

J. H. Bigger, entomologist with the University of Illinois and State Natural History Survey, says, “On the basis of only a few tests we cannot make a general outright recommendation that soil treatment be used on all Illinois farms.”

“However, we can suggest that soil treatment is a new, potential means of obtaining higher and more uniform plant population and higher yields without a great increase in expense or labor.”

“Soil treatment is a good, inexpensive insurance program,” Bigger concludes.

If you want to try soil treatment apply aldrin as a spray or mix it with fertilizer. You'll probably get the best results if you apply the insecticide immediately ahead of planting. Disc the field to work the chemical into the soil if you apply it as a spray.

Use 1 1/2 pounds of the chemical per acre if it is broadcast. Cut the amount to 1 pound an acre if it is applied in rows.

Weed Identification Booklet Available To Farmers

URBANA — Farmers can now order a new publication with descriptions and pictures of over 200 weeds common to this area.

“Weeds of the North Central States” is designed to aid farmers in identifying weeds. A simplified botanical key is included.

This 240-page publication represents the joint efforts of 13 agricultural experiment stations and the USDA.

Illinois farmers can get copies by writing to the Information Office, College of Agriculture, URBANA, and requesting Circular 718. Cost of the publication is 75 cents.

You can blame winter bronchitis outbreaks in your poultry flock for many cases of poor interior and shell quality in eggs.

1. Clean up after you have finished your repair jobs. Don't leave small bits of metal around where your animals can pick them up.
2. Pick up any metal lying around your barnyard lots or pastures. Don't wait until your animals injure themselves on it.
3. Don't leave machinery around where animals can injure themselves by running into it.
4. Check your buildings and pens for protruding nails. They can puncture the skin and let disease germs in.
5. Block holes in your building foundations to keep your animals from burrowing under them.
6. Ground your wire fence every 200 feet to keep your animals from being electrocuted while they are on pasture during summer electrical storms.
7. Repair or remodel high door sills, short stalls with deep gutters and low, loose fences that may tempt cattle to climb. Many udder and teat injuries are caused in this way.

Don't Expect Miracles Of Soil Conditioners

URBANA—Soil conditioners may do a good job for the gardener, but don't expect miracles of them.

That's a warning from F. F. Weinard, floriculturist at the University of Illinois College of Agriculture. You can't expect a little bit of soil conditioner on top of the soil to have much effect on the deeper layers.

How good a job they do also varies with soil. Weinard says that in greenhouse tests they have observed some good effects with some crops, and in other cases they could see no difference.

He recommends trying out the conditioners on a small scale before you use them over the entire area.

Soil conditioners are expensive, Weinard says, and some of the advertising claims may be a little misleading.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS SOIL EXPERIMENT FIELDS

Soil Tilt and Plant Foods Necessary For Nitrogen Response

Nitrogen fertilizers give different results for different soil conditions.

C. M. Linsley, soils specialist at the University of Illinois, says nitrogen probably won't give good yield increases unless your soil has plenty of other plant foods and has good tilth and water-holding capacity, which are provided largely by legumes and organic matter.

Results from three soil experiment fields given in the accompanying table show some of the causes of good and poor results from nitrogen.

An untreated plot on the McNabb field produced a five-year average of 53 bushels of corn. Since no clover had been grown for many years, an 80-pound application of nitrogen increased the yield by 27 bushels. However, this soil had a good native supply of lime, phosphorus, potassium and organic matter, says Linsley.

On the Kewanee plot, poor soil tilth and a shortage of other plant food elements held down the results from nitrogen. This field just didn't have the natural fertility of the McNabb field.

Nitrogen fertilizer gave only a 5-bushel increase in the Mt. Morris tests. Here poor soil tilth, low water-holding capacity and lack of other plant foods limited production even more than on the Kewanee field.

Adding nitrogen increased corn yields by only 4 bushels on the McNabb plot where lime and rock phosphate had been added. The legume crop was supplying about all of the nitrogen the corn crop could use, says Linsley. The five-year average on this field was 86 bushels of corn.

Sweet clover failures on the Kewanee and Mt. Morris fields, caused by the clover leaf weevil, resulted in a shortage of nitrogen. As a result, nitrogen fertilizer gave increases of 16 bushels on the Mt. Morris field and 25 bushels on the Kewanee field. These plots still had fairly good soil tilth and plenty of lime, phosphorus and potassium.

“These test results,” explains Linsley, “show that nitrogen will not give profitable increases unless the soil has good tilth and is supplied with plenty of lime, phosphorus and potassium. Moreover, a good legume crop will probably supply nitrogen needs. Then applying nitrogen fertilizer won't normally produce profitable increases in crops.”

LOW-COST CATTLE SHED
Plenty of protection will be given cattle by an economical shed being built on an Iowa farm. Posts and poles were cut from the farm timber and put in place with a tractor manure scoop. Used woven wire covers the inside and outside to support bales placed in between the fencing, explains Capper's Farmer. The shed is 7 by 15 by 25 feet and requires 125 bales of straw to build three sides; the front is left open. Woven wire is stretched across pole rafters and straw blown on for the roof.

BUGS BUNNY

Bull Dogs Bow 2-1 At McLeansboro

The Harrisburg Bull Dogs lost a 2 to 1 heartbreaker to the McLeansboro Foxes in a baseball game at McLeansboro yesterday afternoon.

The score was tied 1 to 1 going into the last of the seventh, the final frame. Then McPeck doubled and with two outs and two strikes on Neles, he singled home the winning run.

Dave Anglin went all the way for Harrisburg, allowing four hits and striking out 11. Dean Millenbino hurled for the Foxes and also allowed four hits and fanned 10.

Russ McDowell scored the lone local run, coming home on a fly to the outfield after he had doubled. Wayman Hefner also doubled and Jim Alexander and Anglin got singles.

McLeansboro made two errors, Harrisburg one.

The Bull Dogs play Marion here at 3:30 p. m. Monday.

Mal a Miller? Fans To See in Penn Relays

PHILADELPHIA (U)—Mal Whitfield makes his bow as a miler at the 60th annual running of the Penn Relays today and whether the world's greatest half-miler can double his distance in credible time may depend on the whims of the weatherman.

Whitfield runs in the Benjamin Franklin invitation mile, televised nationally at 4:35 p. m. EST against a field of Murray Halberg, a slim New Zealander who ran a 4:04.4 mile at Auckland last February and the hardy perennials, FBI agents Horace Ashenfelter and Fred Wilt.

Santee, Texans Steal Show at Drake Relays

DES MOINES, Iowa (U)—Wes Santee, the Kansas speed merchant, his teammates and a fleet group of runners from Texas set out to assault several relay records today during the final sessions of this year's Drake Relays.

Light showers were forecast for the morning but the weather bureau saw nothing but mild temperatures and sufficient sunshine during the afternoon to insure a fast track.

Santee and his Jayhawk mates were shooting for records in the two-mile and distance medley relays and were strong favorites to win both events.

Santee had a successful day Friday, anchoring the team to victories in the four-mile and sprint medley relays in addition to setting a new American collegiate mark of 3:21.4 in the sprint medley run.

Four Texas sprinters — Dean Smith, Jerry Prewitt, Al Frieden and Charlie Thomas—hoped to set new world records in the 440-yard and 880-yard relays. They cracked the 440 record at the Kansas Relays last week with 40.3 seconds.

Today's 100-yard dash shaped up as one of the hottest in years. Willie Williams of Illinois, who twice has done 9.4, will fight it out with the Texas trio of Smith, Thomas and Frieden.

About 10,000 fans watched the opening-day competition among 740 athletes.

The big moment was Kansas' record victory in the sprint medley. The Jayhawks' time clipped 13 seconds off the American collegiate sprint medley record set by New York in 1950 and 1.6 off the Drake time.

Illinois and Michigan State ran one-two ahead of Kansas through most of the race.

Illinois was second and Michigan State third.

Carmi Here to Face Strong Merchant Team Sunday

The Harrisburg Merchants will be out for their fourth win of the season Sunday afternoon, meeting the Carmi Epworth Texacoes here. Carmi, a new member of the independent Illinois-Indiana league, has promised to field a stronger team than in previous years.

Buz Kennedy will take the hill for the power-packed Merchants, whose bats battered a good Mayfield, Ky., club last Sunday. Kennedy, a southpaw, has given a good account of himself in 11 innings by giving up only a pair of earned runs. Dick Romonosky, whose bat and trigger arm are winning early praise, will catch.

The Merchants' early showing has won an invitation from the Paducah Chiefs, a Class D member of the Kitty league, for a game next Wednesday night at Brooks stadium in Paducah.

All Merchant players are asked to be ready for batting practice at 12:30 p. m. Sunday.

Last Night's TV Winner Good Prospect for Draft

NEW YORK (U)—Welterweight Jed Black, victorious in his New York debut, may start fighting for Uncle Sam in the near future, it was revealed today.

Black's pending draft call was disclosed after the pug-nosed scrapper from Janesville, Wis., pounded out a split 10-round decision over tough Joey Klein of New York Friday night in their nationally televised and broadcast bout at St. Nicholas Arena.

According to Hector Knowles, who manages Black, the 23-year-old graduate of Michigan State is expecting a call from his draft board "any day now."

Four Items IN THE Sport Parade

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (U)—This is the week when the butcher, the baker and even Grandma pick their longshots for next Saturday's Kentucky Derby and it may hearten the members of the "Knock Down the Favorite" club to learn that the popular choices are beaten 52 per cent of the time.

Last year was a case in point as the fabulous Native Dancer, an odds-on favorite, was beaten off by the shooting Dark Star at a juicy $51.80, for your deuce. The long shot players still are dreaming of a repeat on the 1913 upsetter, Doneraile, who scampered home to the merry tune of $184.90.

Nor was Doneraile the lone outsider that May afternoon just before World War I. Finishing sixth in 1913 was a nag named Lord Marshall which, had he won, would have paid $98 for a two-spot.

So let the chalk eaters sneer. As has been proved so often, anything can win this one.

The bravest men in major league baseball if you are superstitious are Sibby Sisti of the Braves and Ed Pellagrini of the Pittsburgh Pirates. They are the only ones under the big top who wear the number 13.

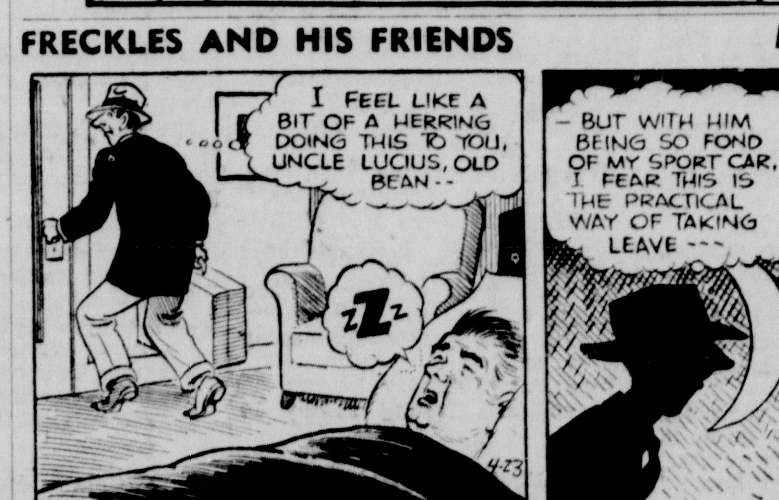

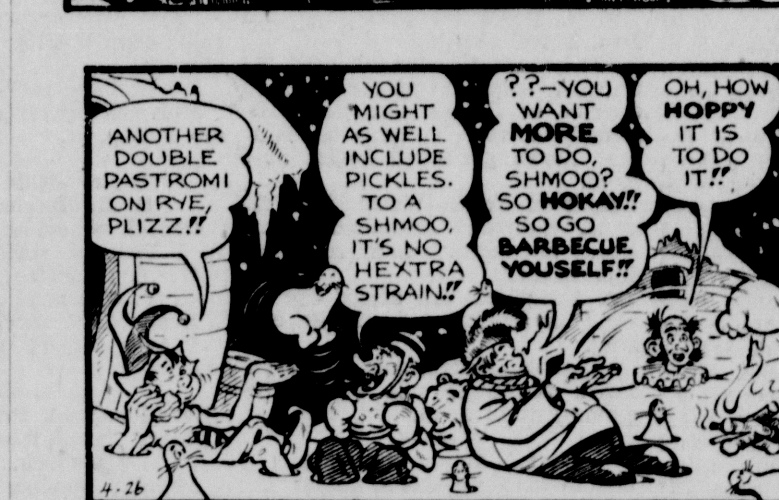

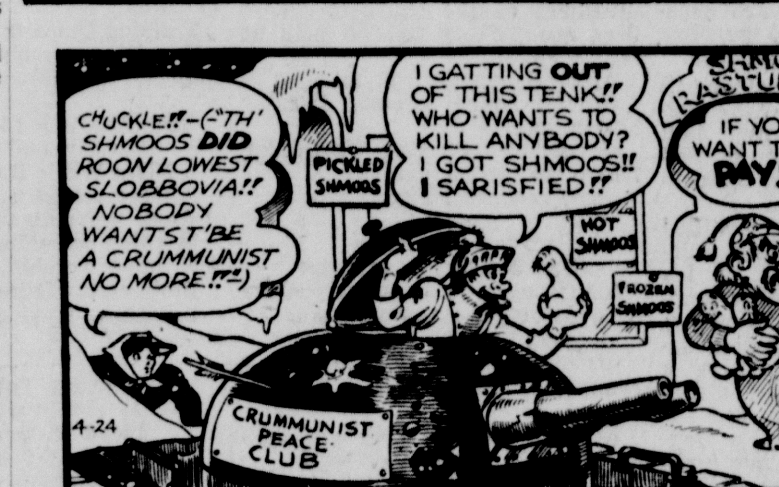

With a half dozen top distance men shooting for the first four minute mile, British marathon runner Jim Peters has his money bet on Briton Gordon Pirie. He reveals that Pirie is running almost 200 miles a week to build up endurance and speed.

Petrie may even startle the sports world with a 3.55 performance. It will be tough because with the record at 4:01.4, hopeful Mal Whitfield estimates that the 14 seconds alone is comparable to 15 yards.

The Pittsburgh Pirates may be "coming" but their inner defense still doesn't rival the old Athletics' 100.00 infield. It is labeled, actually, as a "82.000 infield," with each of the four being paid $6,000 a year, which proves that Branch Rickey hasn't lost his financial touch.

Oil Operations In Saline County

86, with no swab gauges available at this time. Total depth is 2883 through the line.

Miami Operating Company has staked a new location to be drilled in the next few days three miles east of Eldorado. It's the No. 1 Stanley Edmister and others Unitized lease, SE SE SW, 13-8-7c. Ray Farrar, consulting geologist of Mt. Carmel will do the geology.

In this same area, Carter Oil has plugged and abandoned its No. 2 test on the J. R. Davenport, SW NE NW, at a total depth of 2895 feet through the Aux Vases line. The Lower Cypress sand 2563-2616 tested 12 barrel of oil and 4 barrels of water per hour after a nitro shot of 40 quarts.

Just north of Eldorado, the activity is slowing down a little. Carter Oil is still cleaning out and testing saturation on their No. 2 James E. Horn, 8-8-7c, in the Aux Vases sand 2926-28. It swabbed 29 barrels of oil and 152 barrels of water a day while testing.

Abandon No. One Stinson Test. Ashland Oil and Refining is drilling ahead at 2065 on their No. 3 Victor Suttner, in the southeast corner of section 7-8-7c, with Tom Doran's rotary tools of Vandalia.

The test being drilled on the J. W. Leithner farm two miles east of Eldorado, by Walter Duncan and Yale and Buddie Lewis is cleaning out after fracturing the Aux Vases line 2874-76, which drill stem tested 1140 feet of gas, 15 feet of mud mixed oil and 25 feet of oil mixed mud, with a bottom hole pressure of 1140 pounds per square inch.

Calvert and Walter Duncan have finally abandoned their No. 1 O. N. Stinson, 17-8-7c, just north of Eldorado, after unsuccessfully testing all shows of oil in the hole. The Palestine 1908-22, 23-34, 36-55, Far Springs 2190-97, Cypress 2585-2648, Aux Vases 2801-2910, Rosiclare 2964-71 and McClosky 2990-3000 all carried shows of oil, but none of them were commercial.

Calvert Drilling has moved its rig back up four miles northwest of Eldorado, and is drilling today below 2180 on its own No. 1 Davis Smith Unitized lease, 35-7-6c, in a partnership with Walter Duncan.

The wildcat location on the Thomas Mahoney estate, in section 29-7-7c, four miles due north of Eldorado, owned by Coy Oil Company of Evansville, has been abandoned due to the dry hole on the Otis Carter lease, a southeast offset, plugged last week.

Play Comes Natural For Ridgway Boys, Who Cop Honors

Al Penman's Ridgway high athletes walked off with top honors in the Greater Egyptian conference's annual Play Day activities staged last night at Pope County high school.

Ridgway took first in the volleyball and ping pong to capture two of the three major events. Cave-in-Rock ousted defending champion Pope Co. in the strength contest, massing 999 points to Pope's 846. Rosiclare finished third and Ridgway fourth in this event.

Keith Sanders won the ping pong singles, and Charlie Barter took second place honors. Both boys are from Ridgway. The two lads teamed up in the doubles to also bring the Gallatin county school title and a clean sweep of the pingpong tourney. Pope Co. finished second and Rosiclare third.

In the volleyball tournament, Ridgway eliminated Cave, 15-10, 12-15 and 15-11 while Rosiclare was defeating Pope Co., 15-10 and 15-13. Then in the title deciding game, the Eagles edged Rosiclare, 15-12 and 15-11. Rosiclare has won the volleyball tourney the past two years.

Three new records were set in the strength contests. Cave-in-Rock's Dutton led his mates to victory by smashing two of the records. Dutton was successful in 106 pushups to shatter the old record of 48. He also did 45 pull ups, breaking the old record of 34.

Pope Co. broke the rope climbing record with a team effort of 58 seconds, but Cave-in-Rock topped this with a 52 second record smasher. The old time was a minute and four seconds.

Only four conference schools participated in the Play Day activities which drew a crowd of several hundred persons.

Hack's Hitters Continue To Burn Up League; Cards Fizzles in 14th, Lose 7-5

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer

Nobody could blame Stan Hack, the new manager of the Chicago Cubs, for hanging a "do not disturb" sign outside his Cincinnati hotel room today because he's entitled to those wonderful dreams.

Any moment he could wake up and find that he's got that seventh place club of 1953 which caused Phil Cavarretta such nightmares that he finally lost his job as manager. But right now these Cubs

Bevo Eyes Trotters, Talks This Week End

RIO GRANDE, Okla. (U)—Clarence (Bevo) Francis, star center of the Rio Grande college basketball team, and Coach Newt Oliver, today planned week-end contract talks with Abe Saperstein of the professional Harlem Globetrotters in New York.

Oliver indicated he might sign with Saperstein if suitable terms can be arranged, although he said he had had three other offers from unidentified teams.

Both he and his famed protege will be at large this fall. Francis has already dropped out of school, due to scholastic and financial difficulties, and Oliver has submitted his resignation, effective Sept. 1.

Odds Say It Will Be Fisherman or Correlation

NEW YORK (U)—Fisherman and Correlation clash for the first time this season at Jamaica today in the $122,750 Wood Memorial with the favorite's role in next week's Kentucky Derby and a winner's purse of $86,000 hanging in the balance.

Six other colts were scheduled to run in the mile and an eighth classic but it was the third meeting between C. V. Whitney's Fisherman and Robert S. Lytle's Correlation that drew an expected crowd of 50,000 to the race course.

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
A common experience in life is the extent to which ideas formed when one is young become altered in the light of what one learns later.

A striking instance of this in relation to Biblical events and characters is found in all that the Bible has to say about King Solomon. Probably like many others, I grew up believing that King Solomon was "the wisest man that ever lived." The wisdom of Solomon for adults as well as for children was proverbial. That belief would be justified if all we knew concerning Solomon were the accounts of his choice of wisdom and understanding above all things (1 King 3); the story of his wise judgment between women, each claiming a child (same chapter), and his building of the temple (1 Kings 8).

But what a contrast and a tragedy of degradation when one turns to 1 Kings 11! What has become of the wise king, with his love of "strange women," his seven hundred wives and his three hundred concubines who have "turned away his heart?"

Also, what has become of the glorious temple, built by a king who has turned to idolatry, with all its corrupt and foul practices? Nor was this all. Associated with Solomon's moral downfall was the injustice and oppression that he inflicted upon the people. This soon became evident upon his death, when the people demanded a lessening of the burdens which Solomon had inflicted upon them.

Great palaces, and even great temples, have too often been built out of the life-blood of the people. There had been disaffection and rebellion while Solomon lived, but the revolts had failed. But now, one rebel, Jeroboam, who had escaped to Egypt, returned and led a successful rebellion.

He became King of Ten Tribes, in the Northern Kingdom of Israel, while two tribes remained loyal to Rehoboam, Solomon's son, in the Southern Kingdom of Judah. It was a successful revolution, but the revolutionist failed. Jeroboam, virtually anointed by a prophet, risen to power with every opportunity, soon emulated all that was evil in Solomon with none of Solomon's glory.

In about two hundred years the Northern Kingdom went down to disaster and defeat. Its Ten Tribes, the "Lost Ten Tribes of Israel," dispersed from a kingdom never to be restored. Some profess to see the survival of the "Tribes" in the Britons of a later era. The cult of Anglo-Israel in its widespread propaganda has made much of this. I have been personally well propagandized, but can see little warrant for the claim.
